Numbered 6, the stand off or five-eighth is usually a strong passer and runner, while also being agile. Often this player is referred to as "second receiver", as in attacking situations they are typically the second player to receive the ball (after the half back) and are then able to initiate an attacking move.

I've noticed that a good number of people come here looking for pictures and ideas for building a goat head catch or milking stand at home. I've included some pictures in my previous Goat 101 posts, but I wanted to devote an entire post to this subject, since it is a simple project you can do at home, often with scrap lumber.. First off, is a milking stand really even necessary?
